

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is a concept that connects local farmers to their market by having customers buy a ‘share’ in the farm in return for receiving fresh in-season vegetables for the duration of the growing season.

While some farms deliver their produce to their customers (or more often a pick-up point central to most customers), others invite their customers to come and pick up their produce at the farm itself.

Below please find a list of the CSA farms in Massachusetts which serve the Boston area.
